

have been away for the first half of the year. it has been a challenging few.

slowly trying to get back into social coding again.

I have been working on a few things, perhaps the most exciting one I find is srclang.org which is a programming language that does a bunch of things, which I struggle to explain succinctly.

So the next couple of posts will be about me trying to articulate what it is and why I am building it.

I might also end up disappearing again, cause health is priority numero uno.